Support

The project is being supported from 2009 to 2010 by the State of Saxony-Anhalt with funds from the European Regional Development Fund (ERDF).

Success through Cooperation

Combine strengths. Exploit potentials. Transfer knowledge.

October 12-13, 2010
Schloss Hohenerxleben

Ideas, Partners, Funding, Markets

The region of Saxony-Anhalt is inviting representatives of regional and national business, academia, research, politics and government to the first international conference on biomass logistics entitled "Success through Cooperation" to exchange experiences and discuss issues and topics of future interregional collaboration.

As a renewable raw material, biomass is distinguished by a multitude of properties that promise to facilitate the implementation of regional, national and European objectives related to cutting the consumption of fossil fuels and achieving climate protection goals. An integrated view of ecological, economic and social aspects during the production, supply and utilization of biomass is essential if biomass is to fulfill the great expectations vested in it.

Increasingly, producers, consumers and service providers are realizing that only economically and ecologically expedient logistics will enable them to safeguard competitiveness and create future jobs. Intensified utilization of biomass and the increasing importance of logistical factors are generating a mounting need for both regional and interregional innovation. Hence, interregional cooperation between professionals and governments is increasingly becoming a success factor.

This two-day international conference is intended to raise the different regional European actors' awareness of the opportunities to intensify their utilization of biomass and the particular challenges of biomass logistics. At the conference, top speakers will deliver presentations on regional and European activities, potentials for cooperation and means of financing as well as trends, research and technical challenges and practical experiences.
