

Kiel Institute Policy Lunch at the Hertie School of Governance

8 June 2011

12.30 -1.30 p.m. (incl. Lunch)

Hertie School of Governance | Friedrichstr. 180, 10117 Berlin

The Kiel Institute Policy Lunch on

»China's Role in the International Monetary System«

will introduce innovative, solution-oriented, and practical proposals for reforming international financial governance:

- The rise of China as major creditor creates new economic realities and risks.
- The current international monetary system is a permanent source of instability as it cannot address these new realities adequately.
- Unilateral policies produce resentments and trigger protectionist spirals.
- We propose what a new international monetary system to overcome these problems should look like.

We hope to welcome you to a stimulating discussion between Jean Pisani-Ferry, Rolf Langhammer, and the audience.

Please inform us by May 30, 2011, whether you will attend.
