

INTERNATIONAL JOINT RESEARCH PROJECT

Physical Violence and State Legitimacy in Late Socialism

Final Conference

Organised by Centre for Contemporary History,
Potsdam (ZZF)

Venue: Humboldt University of Berlin
27 February–1 March 2014

The historical research network on violence after Stalinism is funded by the Wissenschaftsgemeinschaft Gottfried Wilhelm Leibniz e.V. (WGL). The project is hosted by the Centre for Contemporary History, Potsdam (ZZF) in cooperation with the Institute for East and Southeast European Studies in Regensburg and the European University Institute in Florence.

The network investigates the relationship between physical violence and state legitimacy after Stalinism. It addresses the following questions: How did the party-state control violence after Stalin? How did political legitimization change after 1956? To what extent did physical violence disappear from politics? How was physical violence in the private sphere dealt with? Did these changes contribute to the decline of communism?

The project's international research network is contributing to the debates about the nature of communist dictatorships, to the causes of the European revolutions of 1989 and the break-up of the Soviet Union in 1991. Its aim is to strengthen international cooperation and support comparative and transnational research in the field of communist studies.
